

HOWLAND'S

Entrances on Main street, Fairfield avenue, and Cannon street.

Bridgeport, Conn.,
Friday, January 15, 1909.The Weather—Fair and colder to night and Saturday.It was a wonderful
Mill End beggining

Once again the Mill End sale proved itself. Once more it was shown that no weather conditions can effect the sale to its detriment. Once again, women attested their belief in the sale—a belief that brings the crowds through rain or snow. It was a glorious day.

How the dollars did roll in! How the merchandise did hurry out! How faces did glow with satisfaction! How much pleasure there was in gathering the Mill End lots that were so full of savings! How easy it was to save money; even easier than it usually is to spend it.

The good beginning is to be followed by equally good progress. The Mill End sale will be just as attractive every day as it was on opening day. That is one of its strong features. It wears. It lasts. It does not peter out. It contains so many things and so great quantities of each, that it is attractive every day.

Truer is this today than ever. The new store offers better facilities than did the old. More room; that means more Mill End lots. More Mill End lots are combined with even better Mill End lots. With them is the distinctive impressive Mill End price; a price that always spells a substantial saving. Those prices are found in every department. The yellow price-tickets tell great stories. Come and see them.

CHILD'S DEATH STOPS DIVORCEFather in Prison After Unsuccessful Effort to Take Life of Wife.

The action brought by Kathryn H. Popp of Darien for divorce was not heard today as counsel for the plaintiff, John Kehoe of Norwalk, told the court that during the week a child of the plaintiff had lost its life through fire. The action is based on the ground of cruelty, the plaintiff having been attacked by her husband with a knife and severely wounded. Then Popp thinking that he had killed his wife tried to end his own life by slashing his throat. The wound, self-inflicted, did not go deep enough to cause dissolution, so he recovered, was arrested and is now serving one year in Wethersfield.

Deaths and Funerals.

The funeral of George D. Hunt was largely attended from his late residence, 443 North Washington avenue, yesterday afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock and later at the Olivet Congregational church. The services were conducted by the Rev. Morgan Miller. At the conclusion of the church service, the ladies of the G. A. R. held flag service, and at the grave in Park cemetery a delegation from Elias Howe, Jr., Post No. 3, G. A. R., the Knights of Pythias and John C. Tutill Camp, W. O. W., held their respective rituals. The pall bearers were Willard H. Raymond and Charles A. Deas of Mithra Lodge, K. of P.; Stacy Hall and Harvey Gray from the G. A. R., and Samuel Cone and Charles A. Ober from the Woodmen of the World.

Louisa T., widow of John M. Gilbert, died this morning at the Sterling Widows' Home, on Prospect street, at the age of 86 years, of pneumonia. The deceased left no children, but is survived by a sister, Mrs. Judd and several grand children.
John Griffin, a well known resident of the South End, died last night at his home, 122 Atlantic Street, at the age of 36 years. He was about the city as usual Wednesday although he had been ailing for some six months. He was employed till last September, at the Round House. He is survived by a widow and seven children, the oldest of whom is twelve years and the youngest one year; also by his mother, a sister, Margaret Griffin and four brothers, Daniel of Newtown and Michael, Stephen and Patrick of Pasco, N. J. The deceased was a member of Live Oak Camp, W. O. W.

HAINS IS NOT GUILTY

His face was ghastly pale and deep dark rings appeared under the eyes and stood out like blackened muscles. Justice Crane started to discharge the jury when Major Hains, brother of Thornton Hains, burst through the doors sweeping aside two stalwart uniformed guards with the very impetuosity of his rush. He was perspiring from every pore, the tears were streaming down his cheeks and he plaintively cried: "Where is Tonnle? Where is my brother Tonnle? Thank God, he is free, he is free."

"The jury is discharged," said Justice Crane as he straightened back in his chair, "and I want to thank this jury at this point for their excellent work and worthy patience with which they weighted this evidence and returned the verdict. Your work was splendid, gentlemen, and you are models for American jurors."

Crane then sternly admonished the police, "I want word sent to the captain of the police," he said, "that this defendant must be protected when he leaves the court house. He is to be free to go where and when he pleases and there must be no molestation or demonstration."
Attorney McIntyre shaking with joy, thanked the court and jury while Thornton Hains did the same. When the judge arose to leave the bench Major Hains bounded forward and in a second was clasped in the arms of his brother. It was a heart-breaking scene as these two strong men alternately wept and embraced and patted each other's faces.
Thornton Hains personally thanked each member of the jury and then turned to Shay. "I must phone mother and father," he said, "Oh, I must tell them. I must tell them. And they will be so glad. And our poor Peter. I shall never leave him. I am going back to the Long Island City jail and stay with him. I cannot desert him any more than I could on that horrible day last August."

Shay quieted Thornton and he was hurried to a nearby phone and called up the room in the Hotel Astor. It was her own son's voice that first told the aged gray-haired lady that a jury of twelve men had believed his statements and had given him his freedom.

"I am the happiest man on earth. I have been vindicated. I am going to Long Island City to see Connie. Then I'm going to see Dad and Ma at the Hotel Astor. Tomorrow I am going to Washington to get little Mollie."

"FLOOD" CASES
MAY BE SETTLED

The Bridgeport Hydraulic Company is settling some of the many cases brought against it by plaintiffs who were damaged by the breaking of the Beardsley park dam, in 1906, and the consequent flood. Comley & Comley, who were attorneys for plaintiffs in a number of these actions, have written to some of those whom they represent, conveying the information just given.

In this letter it is said that a greater part of the cases have been settled for a nominal sum. It is further said that this nominal sum must be accepted, or the cases must be tried in June or, in contrary, stricken from the docket.

It is said that H. Welner, 90 River street, is among those who have been settled with. He is reputed to have received a sum in the neighborhood of $100.

It is probable that the litigation growing out of the flood will soon be ended, it being likely that the unsettled cases must be abandoned because of the poverty of the plaintiffs.

The suit for damages brought by the city in this connection was actually in the interests of these poor people. The defeat of the city virtually meant their defeat.

BROWN HAS FELL.

Joseph Brown, a painter living at Main and Congress streets, fell from a scaffold on a building at the corner of Pembroke and Steuben streets, this afternoon, a distance of ten feet. The ambulance brought him to the emergency hospital where Dr. McGovern found that Brown was badly bruised and his ankle broken.
